

WARNER PLEADS GUILTY TO ASSAULT AND BATTERY CHARGE WITH INTENT TO KILL WIFE; MRS. WARNER ON STAND

Victim in Hospital for Fourth
Month, is Now Partially Paralyzed

"WAS NOT UNFAITHFUL"
Woman Claims Men She Went Out With Were Friends of Husband

DOYLESTOWN, June 4—John E. Warner, Bath street, Bristol, pleaded guilty in Bucks County court this morning, to a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill his wife, Jessie Warner. The shooting occurred, it is claimed, at the Warner home on November 12, 1939, Mrs. Warner, aged 27 years, being paralyzed for many months afterward and confined to a hospital. Appearing on the witness stand this morning, partly paralyzed, Mrs. Warner testified in her own behalf.

The young woman informed the jury and the court, with both Judges Hiram H. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer presiding, that her husband fired three shots at her on November 12th last at her home. She stated that one of the shots lodged near her spine, and another entered her arm. She was hospitalized for four months, and today walked with difficulty.

Mrs. Warner, on the stand, denied that she was unfaithful to her husband. She said that two weeks prior to the shooting, when her husband took her for a ride in his automobile, that he had tried to beat her over the head. During cross-examination by John P. Betz, Warner's attorney, she admitted that she visited tap-rooms without her husband, "sometimes with girl friends, and sometimes with friends of my husband." She admitted going out with other men, "but they were friends of my husband," she added. Another admission was to the effect that she attended dances, "but I went with my friends only after he refused to learn to dance."

According to the Bristol woman she received a bouquet from a former admirer after Warner struck her on the head. The bouquet, sent in sympathy for the "bump," she stated was from one who had courted her previous to her marriage. Her friendships, she said were all "on the level," the men whom she accompanied being friends of Mr. Warner, some of the group having taken Christmas gifts to her at her home in the presence of her husband.

Warner, according to the wife, has written her on several occasions during his incarceration at Doylestown. "He never expressed any reason for shooting me," she testified "and only on one occasion did he say he was sorry the shooting had occurred."

P. O. S. of A. Much Pleased
Over Flag Salute Ruling

Members of Camp 789, Patriotic Order Sons of America, together with other camps of that order throughout Pennsylvania, are highly pleased over the eight-to-one decision of the Supreme Court, to the effect that school children must salute the American flag if State laws so require, "because the flag symbolizes a national unity which transcends all internal differences, religious or otherwise."

Camp 789, together with other camps, helped to fight for this decision. The ruling upset a decision of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia.

The fight began when a school board expelled two children at Minersville from classes. The children were members of a religious cult, Jehovah's Witnesses, which it is said is of the belief that saluting the flag violates one of the ten commandments, a prohibition against worship of images. School privileges were denied after they refused to salute and give the oath of allegiance to the flag. The decision ended an eight-month session by the court. It is said the ruling came as members of the cult were being run out of Texas, California and Oklahoma towns for refusing to salute the flag, and also for distributing pamphlets.

335,000 Troops Taken Out of Death Trap

London, June 4—A total of 335,000 British and French troops have been successfully evacuated from Flanders, under way of Dunkerque, Prime Minister Winston Churchill disclosed in the House of Commons today.

"They have been brought from the jaws of death by a miracle of deliverance," he said.

"Allied resistance," Churchill said, "totalled 30,000 killed, wounded and missing. Nearly 1,000 guns were left behind in the evacuation."

(Editor's note: The Germans claim that 330,000 British and French were taken prisoner in Flanders and Artois.) Before a crowded house, Churchill outlined the history of the war from the time the Germans broke through the Sedan defenses.

"Only rapid retreat to Amiens could have saved the situation, but the French high command, which was in complete charge of the situation, did not immediately realize this strategic point."

"The German eruption swept up the coast like a scythe. The British at Calais were given an hour in which to surrender, but there were four days of street fighting before silence swept over Calais. Only 30 uninjured soldiers were brought off by the navy. "The sacrifice was not in vain. At least two German armored divisions had to be sent to overcome them."

Nine Injured in Trenton

Trenton, N. J., June 4—Nine persons were injured early today when a passenger bus collided with a transport truck and overturned against the side of St. Mary's Catholic Cathedral in Trenton.

Stanley Jessen, 24, of New York, driver of the bus, and two Philadelphians, were detained at Mercer Hospital, where the others were treated for minor injuries.

Narvik is Mass of Ruins

Stockholm, June 4—The Nazi port of Narvik, captured by British and Norwegian troops after a long siege, is a mass of smoking ruins as the result of a German air raid, it was learned today.

Eleven German planes launched the attack, dropping a number of incendiary bombs on the southern part of the town—these starting fires which quickly spread to the north, and destruction was estimated at several million Kroner.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

New Hope high school alumni association has elected new officers for the coming year, the new president being Hampton Hayes; vice-president, Samuel Warford; secretary, Miss Betty Hartman; treasurer, John Flood. Amendments to the constitution were also adopted. It has been announced that one scholarship has been paid, and a second will be paid within a short time.

A banquet in honor of the graduating class was an event of Saturday evening, the theme of the affair being "Reminiscences."

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Buckman, Newtown, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Richard Tomlinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Tomlinson, on Wednesday afternoon, June 19th, in the Friends' meeting house in Newtown.

Sixty-seven-year-old Anna Johnson Schneider and 36-year-old William B. Brown, both writers living in the literary sector of Bucks county, were married May 30th at Fredericksburg, Va., according to a report received from that city.

The two have lived for some time in Sundale, and have been neighbors, of such persons as John Wexler, author; Dorothy Parker, and Stanley Howe, secretary to Mayor LaGuardia, of New York.

R. Chapman Carver, supervising principal of the Buckingham schools, delivered the address at the promotion exercises of the eighth grade pupils of the Warwick township consolidated school in the school building, Jamison, last evening.

Diplomas were presented by David Stewart, president of the school board, and Miss Dorothy Paul, principal of the school, awarded the prizes.

The program included: prayer, Rev. Ernest vandenBosch; Twenty-third Psalm, members of class; singing, "Follow the Glean," chorus; address, Mr. Carver; selections on the accordions, Donald Plack and Jack Palmer; presentation of diplomas and prizes, and operetta, "Snow White."

Friends in Doylestown have learned of the death of the Rev. Charles W. Jefferis, who, from May 1, 1906, until March 1, 1920, served as pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Doylestown.

Rev. Mr. Jefferis, who since his retirement from the ministry had lived in North Wales, died at his home on Memorial Day following a long illness. The veteran clergyman succeeded the Rev. Samuel A. B. Stoop to the pastorate in the county seat, and he was succeeded by the Rev. Bernard Repass, the present pastor.

SCHOOL BOARD HOLDS ITS MONTHLY SESSION

Transacts Routine Business;
Discusses Various Details As To Schools' Operation

AWARD ONE CONTRACT

Bristol school board met in regular monthly session last night and in addition to transacting routine business affairs discussed numerous questions of detail concerning the operation of the schools during the coming term.

Arthur P. Brady, chairman of the property committee, reported two bids had been received for the installation of new toilet facilities in the Bath street building. The contract was awarded to Robert C. Welk, he being the lowest bidder.

Emil Metzger informed the board of visits he had made to various rooms and called particular attention to the Washington street building, where he said he found conditions very satisfactory.

JUDGE BOYER SENDS BRISTOL MAN TO JAIL FOR ATTACKING GIRL

Tells James Nocito That Men
Like Him Roaming Around
Country Are A Menace

GIVEN 1½ TO 2 YEARS

Must Also Pay Fine of $100
And Costs of Prosecution
In The Case

DOYLESTOWN, June 4—"Men like you roaming around the country at large are a menace to all girls," declared Judge Calvin S. Boyer yesterday in the Bucks county criminal court, as he sentenced James Nocito, 34, Bristol prize fighter, to pay a fine of $100 and costs and serve 1½ to 2 years in the Bucks County Prison.

Nocito, arrested by County Detective Anthony Russo, as a result of an assault that the defendant allegedly made on a 20-year-old Bristol Township girl on the afternoon of May 9, this year, pleaded guilty to charges of assault and battery and fornication. He went on trial before a jury on an additional charge of rape, but this charge was dropped after testimony in the case of the Commonwealth had been presented.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Boyer said to the defendant, who has been in court before: "Sometimes we take into consideration, in cases of this kind, all the circumstances under which the crime charged, was committed, but the Court is of the opinion that you do not have much respect for law."

"We have a lot of trouble with Philadelphia in the past, driving into Bucks county with young girls they pick up, cruising around and committing crime. It is difficult to tell just what the real facts are in this case, but the Court is of the opinion that the girl in the case protested against your conduct. You deserve little consideration."

In the Court of Common Pleas yesterday, Judge Boyer handed down an important decision in the appeal of Marcus W. Gilbert from the decision of the Board of Adjustment of Perkasie Borough. Judge Boyer ruled that the zoning ordinance of the Borough is constitutional but that in this particular case the Board of Adjustment made a decision that was not constitutional. The Board refused the appellant's application for a building permit to erect a double, private garage upon a lot situated in the Borough.

Alex Rotelli, Ambler, who was convicted last week in court on a charge of fornication and bastardy, will appear

Schemeluy Held For Term of Juvenile Court

Giving an amateur re-enactment of Grover Bergdoll when he escaped from Federal authorities to search for a hidden pot of gold, a Bristol youth was brought back from Atlantic City yesterday, after he had eluded the Bristol police a few days ago, when he was permitted his freedom to get allegedly stolen money and restore it to the rightful owners.

Norman Schemeluy, 16, Mill street, was handed over to the Bristol police yesterday at Atlantic City and was brought back here by Officer VanSant. He was given a hearing before Justice of Peace Edward Lynn, and held without bail for the juvenile court. He is charged with burglary.

In a statement which police said Schemeluy gave them and which Schemeluy admitted was his, when it was shown to him last night by Justice Lynn, the defendant admitted:

Entering the shoe store of Bernie Ballow, 308 Mill street, on April 22nd, and taking $7 from the cash register. Entrance was gained through a back door. Two weeks later, May 7th,

ALL TOSPY-TURRY

Of course, the game isn't over until the last man is out in the ninth inning and anything may—and often does—happen in a ball game, as in a prize fight or a war or a horse race or any other contest.

So let's not go out on a limb with loose talk and prognostications. The safest way is to make a mind bet, and so, whether you lose or win, you can drop a quarter in the slot near the ear of your little clay pig bank and you'll be all to the good.

We are thinking at the moment about baseball. Aren't the box scores and tables of standings funny at this time of year? You'll have a hard time finding the "invincible" Yankees unless you hunt for them away down in a sub-cellar, and the other New York City mainland team, the once mighty Giants, will be found kicking around somewhere in the middle of No Man's Land.

And who's on the top of the pile? Oh, some chaps in uniforms emblazoned with the names of places such as Boston and Cincinnati and, strange as it seems, believe it or not, a place which is not even a city, the borough of homes and churches and rubber plants and a fighting ball club—Brooklyn.

Well, as we said before, it is a funny picture but it may be funnier still if this funny business keeps up. But from the point of view of the till, it isn't funny at all. The Yankee fans are reported to be packing the stadium to witness the spectacle of great men taking it on the chin and falling in the dust of the diamond; and the rivers and bridges and tunnels hum with traffic as much of New York rushes over to gaze on the once lowly Dodgers in their moment of glory.

No wonder baseball is the national game. It's a great sport and great sport, a distinction with hardly a difference.

NOW ALL IS KNOWN

Speaking the other day before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a professor of the University of Rochester said that college graduates frequently can discuss the parallelistic doctrine of Spinoza, but hasn't sense enough to hold a simple job. He added that many college graduates had "intellect, but not intelligence." His conclusions were based on study of student guidance at universities.

"College graduates can discourse very learnedly and dispassionately about the forms of government of Plato," he elucidated, "or the parallelistic doctrine of Spinoza. But when they have to decide some everyday problem they become flustered and often leave it unsettled, complaining of a headache." Consequently, many graduates, when turned out into the industrial world, are so immature in their ability to adjust themselves to the various demands of life that they flounder ground aimlessly.

If one is to pursue the Professor's inquiry as to the causes of this graduate failure, one must necessarily pursue it to its professional source. Having done so, one makes a discovery having relation to the failure of most of the policies formulated by professional experts. It is this: College professors must, like college graduates, be limited in intelligence though they may have expanded intellects.

NEWS BRIEFS FROM SUBURBAN TOWNS

HULMEVILLE

A trained animal show was witnessed on the school property today by pupils of Hulmeville-Middletown public school.

Mrs. Harvey Hubbs and daughter Sandra, of Newark Valley, N. Y., were guests from Sunday until today of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jackson.

The recently-purchased 300-gallon pumper and tank wagon will be delivered on Wednesday, June 12th, to the William Penn Fire Company. Firemen request that those who pledged donations toward this fund give same to any of the officers; or if desired the money will be called for. A business meeting of the firemen is scheduled for eight o'clock, Friday evening, in the fire station.

On Friday evening, the Wesley Club of Hulmeville Methodist Church, will sponsor a joint supper and entertainment program, open to all members of the congregation, Sunday School, and friends. The covered dish supper will be at 6.30 in charge of the following committee: The Misses Marie Hanson, Helen Harkness, Margaret Diegel, Jean Odgers, Ruth Miller. The entertainment program, which follows at eight, will be in charge of Elma E. Haefner, Adeline E. Ketz, and Kimball Faust, and he is the nature of a unique "Quiz." Miss Helen Woolman is in charge of tickets. Admission fee will be a small sum of money, and a dish of food.

Guests on Sunday of Mrs. Helen Dilck and family, were: Mrs. Rose Donohoe, and Dr. and Mrs. William Donohoe and daughter Claire Louise, Lancaster.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dassenburg, week-ended with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dassenburg, of Archbald.

Serving as hostesses at the luncheon of the Get-Together Club on Thursday at one p. m., in Neshaminy Methodist Church, will be Mrs. George Spill and Mrs. Samuel Black.

who insisted that this was a dangerous policy and that it was far better to face the facts. Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia made a remarkably fine speech on these lines. Senator Tydings of Maryland strongly insisted on both taxes and economy as essential parts of any defense program, and various newspapers deplored the Presidential unwillingness even to touch the tax problem at this session.

BUT, the change in the Administration attitude did not occur until the White House secretariat discovered that many thousands of letters addressed to the President had been pouring in, not protesting against taxes but demanding taxes. Investigation showed that other thousands of the same kind, clearly spontaneous and unorganized, were being received by members of the House and Senate. It was an unprecedented demand of a people not to be relieved of taxes but to be taxed. But even after the volume of these letters had been called to his attention Mr. Roosevelt did not immediately change his position.

THE initiative came from Congress. A movement to introduce a tax bill along the lines urged by Senator Byrd—to wit, a ten per cent, horizontal increase in income taxes and a ten per cent. increase in all other internal revenue levies—got under way in the House.

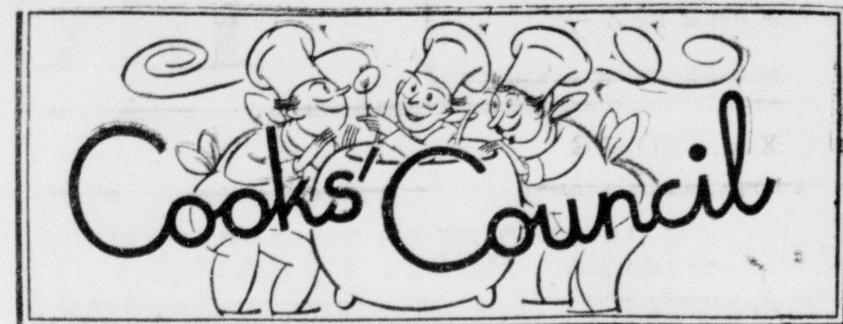

Senator Harrison, chairman of the Finance Committee, asked for a conference with the President and Mr. Morgenthau, expressed his belief the country wanted a tax increase and Congress wanted to enact one. Then—and not until then —did Mr. Roosevelt approve the plan to levy taxes to carry defense appropriations. Then—and not until then—did he abandon the idea that these billions could just be borrowed, the amount added to the debt and the question of paying taken up later. Now he is supporting the Doughton tax bill, but he literally has been prodded by the public on one side and Congress on the other.

IT has been a remarkable exhibition of a people leading rather than following. In this instance it is the President who follows and the people who lead. The perfidious idea of borrowing billions without any knowledge of where the money is to come from has been side-tracked by popular sentiment manifested through polls and letters. We are going to have a tax bill because the public has sense enough to know that it is an essential part of defense and that its omission might be calamitous. Of course, increased taxes should be coupled with reduced expenditures, but for that Presidential support would really have to be forced.

YESTERDAY Senator Byrd introduced a resolution for a ten per cent. reduction in all Governmental expenditures, including salaries of Senators and Representatives, exempting only national defense and debt interest. Two years ago he got 28 votes for an identical resolution in the Senate. There is a prospect today that, even without Mr. Roosevelt's support, it can be passed. It is the sort of action to which there would be a great public response. It would be evidence of the ability of the United States to measure up to an emergency and it would demonstrate a capacity for the kind of self discipline indispensable to effective national effort.

MORE than that—it would be clear warning to the world that when America says she is going to get herself in shape, she means what she says. More than that—if

TOMATO JUICE TIPS

Nothing succeeds like tomato juice when it comes to getting a meal off to an enthusiastic start. That is the reason for its popularity from the day's beginning—at breakfast and on through lunch, afternoon "pick-me-up," dinner, and last but also important, late snack or nightcap.

Tomato juice, with its natural, fresh tang, is just right for its purpose as it comes from the can, but if you serve it as frequently as most people do you will want to give it the benefit of these delicious variations.

Tomato Juice Cocktail

Mix thoroughly—
2 cups canned tomato juice
2 tablespoons chopped onion

2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon red or green pepper sauce
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

1/4 teaspoon salt.
Chill. Strain, then serve accompanied by crisp crackers or canapés.

Tomato and Cucumber Cocktail

Mix thoroughly—
2 cups canned tomato juice
1/2 cup grated cucumber
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1/2 teaspoon evaporated horse-radish soaked in 1 teaspoon cold water 10 minutes.
Chill. Stir well before serving.

Hot Spiced Tomato Juice

Combine and blend well—

1 medium (12-oz.) can tomato juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon red pepper sauce
1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/4 teaspoon onion.

Heat and serve as first course to precede a main dish salad.

Tomato Sauerkraut Eye Opener

Mix equal amounts of tomato juice and sauerkraut juice. Chill and serve for breakfast or as cocktail.

Tomato and Orange Appetizer

Add four parts tomato juice to one part orange juice. Chill and serve as appetizer course.

an economy such as Senator Byrd proposes should be adopted, it would raise their representatives in the esteem of the people and reconcile them to the even heavier taxes bound to come. The difficulty is that Mr. Roosevelt has opposed consistently every effort to cut down. Still, a sufficient public sentiment may change him again.

Pressure of one sort has made him abandon the plan of borrowing without taxes. Pressure of another sort forced him to modify his plan to put the industrialists recently brought to Washington under Mr. Harry Hopkins. Perhaps pressure can bring him to the point of favoring vital economy in a great crisis.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Mickey was not in bed. Clad in pajamas and robe, he was sprawled on the floor, beside a long, solid body which was prone on its stomach. The hands projecting from the long body were drawing things on a piece of paper, which held Mickey's ragged gaze. Half-dozing in a corner rocker, hands in lap, sat Mrs. Blauer.

At Linda's sharp exclamation, the long body rolled over—and the grinning face attached to it was Steve Hubbard's.

"Hullo," said Steve. "Going out?"

"Mother," Mickey enthused, "Steve's drawing for me, Pichers." "Pardon if I don't rise," Steve smiled, "we're right in the midst of a gingerbread house. It's very important that we put walls on it before the roof collapses."

Linda silently stepped over to them and knelt to look at the art work.

"Look out, lady!" Steve said. "Don't soil the hems of that pretty dress. This slumming is dangerous stuff."

Linda saw, on the paper, a beautiful fairy castle, high on a hilltop, backed by clouds, and a woody scene in which was set the unfinished gingerbread house, with quaint haphazard roof and flagstone walks.

"Why," said Linda, "they're lovely!"

"Nothing at all," Steve laughed, "It's the Maxfield Parrish in me."

Linda looked from the sketches to Steve's hands. Funny she hadn't noticed before how long and artistic the fingers were.

Jo and Janice had argued against it, but Linda insisted upon opening the door herself, when Dr. Bill Blaine rang the bell. "Keep him waiting, chump," Jo had complained. "Don't throw yourself at him like a lasso." But when Linda threw open the door in answer to his ring, she was glad she had done it.

"Hello, Linda," Bill smiled. "What's this? Don't tell me I've found a girl who's ready on time!"

"Come in, Bill," she said. "I've been ready for a long time."

And to herself she added: "For tonight!"

Linda had thought that nothing could stir her so much as that first sight she had of Bill Blaine, there, perched dangerously atop the beam across the elevator shaft on Titan Tower, as he had been when he came into her life.

But she had not reckoned upon this Bill Blaine of the impeccable dinner coat, the white shirt front which made his tan all the more pronounced; this Bill whose serious eyes danced with fun, whose miscreant blond hair of the roof-top was now faultlessly groomed.

As he sat down, while she left to get her coat—or, rather, Jo's coat—Linda said:

"Why didn't you think to send flowers?"

"Oh, that," Bill smiled. "Over-sight. I meant to."

"Anyway," smiled Linda, "the thought was there. That was nice."

"Nice corsage," Bill observed. "Personally—for me?"

"Um," Linda answered, which might have been either yes or no.

When she returned, coat-lad and ready to go, Bill decided that he had never seen so thoroughly radiant and lovely a creature.

But Linda was not alone. He finally took his eyes off her to acknowledge the introductions to Miss Marberry and Miss Monroe.

He made no move to stop the car

Linda took her eyes off neither Bill nor Janice at the moment of meeting.

"How do you do?" each said. That was all. There was no perceptible sign of recognition.

Linda wondered if there was nothing there to be seen—or if she were looking at two consummately good actors.

Jo, however, said more than a formal acknowledgment of the introduction. Jo would.

"You'll have to answer to me, young man," Jo said, "if she's in early. Old Aunt Jo is looking out for her interests. Goodby, chile, and don't do everything I'd do."

"Where to?" Blaine inquired, when they were in his long, sleek roadster. "Hungry?"

"Not just now," Linda answered. "Let's drive awhile. Do you mind?"

"When you give the orders," he said, "I mind you."

While they were driving, Linda looked past Bill's clean-cut profile toward the waves piling upon each other in endless, white procession, on the beach. It was more wonderful than she had anticipated. She had never felt so free.

"It's great out tonight," Bill said. Matter of fact words, but the way he said it meant it was great because she was there, beside him.

When they arrived at the Bal Tabarin, "Red," the doorman, greeted Bill as though he were a celebrity. The dreamy strains of the orchestra's signature song, "Duchess of Bal Tabarin," provided entrance music. And Linda, clinging to Bill Blaine's arm, looked as though she belonged there.

The prompt way in which he obtained a preferred table indicated to Linda, although no such indication was needed, that he knew his way around, that he was accustomed to such treatment.

She was even more impressed when a man with a genial smile came to their table and inquired about Bill's golf game.

"In the high eighties, Tom," Bill grimaced. "The higher it gets, the lower I feel."

Bill introduced him to Tom Gerun, one of the owners of the club.

The soft, shaded lights, the music, the crowd of gay dancing celebrants were conducive to a good time. The food and the music charmed her, the wine was heady, exhilarating.

Linda was having a thoroughly good time—the fun she had long planned. And Bill Blaine was being completely charming.

She had never questioned it, it went without saying, so she was not surprised to find that he was a smooth dancer.

She was light as gossamer in his arms—and the excitement, and the wine made her feel lighter than that as they glided past the music stand.

Every dance was Bill's naturally, but the next was his particularly, as the orchestra smoothly elided into the dreamy, plaintive strains of "Muscle, Maestro, Please," the number he had requested.

Nothing, Linda thought, could be nicer than this moment. Wasn't this vibrant, thrilling happiness what life was meant to be?

Bill was humming the same refrain, softly, reminiscently, as they drove away from the club later . . . much later.

She found herself humming it with him, as they drove slowly up the tortuous road to the summit of Twin Peaks, to see the night panorama of city and bay.

He made no move to stop the car up there. She hadn't expected him to. Bill wasn't a college sophomore; the type to think "dance and park" were a hyphenated word. Linda wouldn't acknowledge it and yet although she was glad he didn't stop, she felt a vague disappointment.

Nor did he suggest going to Titan Tower to see the night view of bay, fair and bridges from his office, as he had once invited her to do that day on the roof.

That, Linda hoped, would come later.

As the car stopped in front of her apartment, Bill sat still a long moment, just looking at her and making no move. Then he said: "Thanks, Linda."

Before she could say anything, he had hopped out of the car and opened the door on her side.

Her turn came when they reached the door of the girls' apartment, where Linda was to wait until after he had gone, and then slip to her own apartment.

"Thank you, Bill," she said, "for a lovely evening."

It sounded like a line from a song, she thought, but why shouldn't it—when her heart was singing that way?

"September and I are lucky fellows," he said, "to have had this day . . ."

When he had gone and Linda slipped quietly back through her own door, her heart was still singing.

As she stepped softly into the sleeping Mickey's room, however, some of the elation—some of the effect of the evening's excitement—had worn off.

She stood there very still and very steady, looking down on Mickey's tousled blond head, on his outflung arm, which rested on the coverlet with loosely clenched fist, on his even, steady breathing.

"Mickey, darling," she said, and the voice was for Linda's ears, not his. "Mother really left you tonight. She completely forgot you—for the first time. Can you . . . can you forgive mother—for being happy? Just this once . . ."

Mickey, sleeping soundly, didn't know that his mother's gay evening ended in tears.

But Linda knew.

That first date with Bill Blaine was the beginning of a breath-taking sequence of dream-filled days and glorious nights—days and nights which Linda hoped would never end. From then on Linda felt, for the first time since the end of her brief happiness with Mike Morton, that it was really good to be alive.

At the end of their second evening together, their second date that Linda found ended all too soon, Bill Blaine had kissed her.

They had stood there a lingering moment before the front door of the apartment shared by Janice and Jo—Linda's "home" too, ostensibly to Dr. Blaine.

They had gone dancing and for a long ride afterward down the boulevard overlooking the ocean. Linda's head nestled against Bill's shoulder as he drove.

The only light in the corridor, as they stood there to say good-night, was the dim globe at the end of the hall.

He had stood a moment, looking down at her, a strange unfathomable expression on his face.

Then suddenly—but not before she knew what was happening—he had her in his arms.

"TITAN TOWER" by JAMES G. CHESNUTT

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

The kiss was all that Linda had anticipated; the sure, gentle strength of his arm, the firm pressure—brief but lasting—of his lips on hers; a kiss that might have lasted one second or ten, for its duration was lovely oblivion.

And then Bill had said: "Do you want me to say I'm sorry, Linda?"

And she had said: "Sorry—why, Bill? I'm glad. I wanted you to . . ."

After that there was little to mar their happiness. One date followed another, and they went everywhere together and did the things Linda had dreamed about, with each new meeting more ecstatically happy than the last.

There was little time for Linda to carry out her luncheon trysts with Mr. Avon (alias J. R. Blaine)—she was too busy keeping noon dates with Bill, on the rooftop sun deck, for lunch together and for brief walks about town.

She was able, however, to squeeze in one brief meeting with her fatherly adviser, in which she had told him of her happiness.

"Looks," Mr. Avon had said, "as though everything is working out all right, eh, Linda? You're not sorry you seized happiness while you could?"

And then she had told him—told him about Bill, who he was and how fine and wonderful he was, and how thoroughly happy he made her.

If J. R. Blaine's eyebrows had gone up, or if he had showed any other sign of surprise when Linda revealed the man's identity as Dr. Bill Blaine, Linda had not noticed it.

"But are you sure, child," Mr. Avon had said, "that your young doctor is everything wonderful that you tell me he is? Are you sure that he feels the same way about you?"

Linda said she was sure.

Neither did Linda have time to notice how fine and strong a bond had sprung up between Mickey and Steve Hubbard. Nor did she realize how frequent a visitor to Linda's home Steve had become. Linda, herself, wasn't home enough to notice it.

But Mrs. Blauer had noticed it. "Linda, honey," she said one night, as Linda was hurrying to get to Janice's and Jo's apartment before Bill arrived, "I don't know for the life of me why you go galivanting around willy-nilly like a playgirl or something, when you have something so much more real right here at home."

"It's none of my business, I know," Mrs. Blauer went on, "but if you ask me you're missing something. Why, every time you are going out, there's a real man coming here to see you, without getting so much as a howdy-do from you. Wouldn't surprise me if he got discouraged pretty soon and stopped dropping in. If you ask me, Mr. Hubbard's worth ten of your modern men; he's real and homelike and steady."

"But Bertha," Linda interrupted. "I HAVEN'T asked you."

Then, noting the hurt look which filled Mrs. Blauer's pleasant, motherly face, Linda added:

"But I DO want and appreciate your advice. No one ever had a truer friend than you, Bertha." Linda paused and smiled broadly.

"However, I think you're jumping to conclusions. Mr. Hubbard doesn't come to see me. It's Mickey he's fond of."

"Sure, sure," Mrs. Blauer nodded. "It's Mickey. And why in the world did the good Lord make a girl so beautiful and so blind, all at once?"

Then there came the day that Linda returned home after work to find Mickey and Steve again playing on the rug in the living room, this time with Major, the police dog, safely chained outdoors where he could annoy no one, except the neighborhood cats.

This time it was no wrestling match, but a very different game that the little boy and the somewhat bigger boy were playing. Mickey, a pilot's cap, with bronze wings, jauntily perched on his tousled blond head, was circling the rug afout at breakneck speed, a toy airplane held aloft over his head at arm's length.

"Whirrriiirrr!" he panted, making a noise like what he thought was the sound of a plane.

Says Colored Man
Stopped Her in Park

Although the trio are still confined to bed, it was announced this morning by Mrs. Irene Seipt, daughter of Mr. Schumo, at whose home one of the attacks occurred, they are expected to be about in a day or two. "My father," said Mrs. Seipt, who is a member of the Woods School faculty, "is improving rapidly considering what he went through. With another day or two of rest we anticipate he will have fully recovered. Mrs. Reilly and Miss Russell are resting in bed from the shock, but are expected to be up tomorrow. Their cuts and bruises are healing nicely, and we are all surprised at the rapidity of their recovery."

Four colored men are being detained at the Bristol municipal building, and Pennsylvania Motor Police have two others under surveillance whom they expect to take in custody today for questioning in connection with the case.

The brutal attacks occurred during the early hours of Sunday morning, Miss Jean Russell, aged 15, being awakened from sleep at about 4.30. In her room on the third floor of "Ridgewood House," 220 S. Bellevue avenue, she states she saw a colored man. As she screamed the intruder lunged at her, the two battling. The girl's screams summoned others in the household, and a governess, Mrs. Gabriel Reilly, went to Miss Russell's rescue. The intruder, leaping at Mrs. Reilly, battered her about the face also. He then rushed to the window and made his escape over a small projection of the building.

It is not determined if Mr. Schumo was attacked prior to or after the fracas at "Ridgewood" house, which is a block from the Seipt home. The attack on Mr. Schumo was discovered about two hours later, he being found bleeding, with his face and wrists swollen, after he summoned a maid. He informed that he awakened to see a dark form moving in the room, the intruder going through his pockets. Mr. Schumo arose and battled the alleged thief. In the battle, it is thought that Mr. Schumo lost consciousness. After reviving he rang for aid.

Paris Awaits Next Raid

Paris, June 4—With indications pointing to a far greater casualty list than officially announced after the Nazi raid on Paris, this capital awaited with complete calmness today the next spectacular development of the war.

While informed quarters revealed unofficially that Allied war planes had bombed military objectives in Hitler's favorite city of Munich, in reprisal for the Paris attack, the suspense was intensified as the war whirled on to its new climax. Paris expects these three developments:

A grand German offensive on Paris, with the utilization of every military weapon known.

Active Italian participation in the war.

Renewed air bombardments on a scale heretofore undreamed of.

Observers believe that a new German offensive and Italian entry into the war will coincide—possibly if not probably before the end of this week.

A military spokesman said that 17 still stands as the number of German planes shot down yesterday, although this might increase when all results are in.

London, June 4—The London Daily Mail reported from Stockholm that King Haakon of Norway is seriously ill from a bronchial disorder which it is feared may develop into pneumonia.

German Destroy 400 French Planes

Berlin, June 4—Penetration of Dunkerque by German troops and destruction of between 300 and 400 French fighting planes during the aerial attack on the Paris region was announced by the German high command today.

The official communiqué said: "The battle for Dunkerque is nearing its end. Our troops penetrated the town and captured Fort Louis from the desperately fighting enemy."

"House to house fighting by the British and French troops is still in progress. The French were retained to protect the flight of British soldiers. Numerous fires and explosives were observed."

"In air battles, 79 enemy airplanes were shot down, while between 300 and 400 machines were destroyed in hangars and on the ground."

"On June 3rd, our anti-aircraft artillery shot down 21 enemy machines. Despite these extraordinary successes, only nine of our own machines were missing."

"During the night of June 3rd and 4th, the enemy continued air raids in Holland and western and southern Germany—success was just as small as heretofore."

"In western Germany, one enemy airplane was shot down by anti-aircraft batteries, while two others were also downed by night chasers."

today when the Italian council of ministers approved a series of measures putting the nation and the Italian-African empire on a footing for conflict. The measures were decided upon at a meeting of the council under Premier Mussolini. A communiqué was issued after the session outlined broad details of the new measures, but withheld many other features.

One measure approved a series of steps designed to give execution to "international agreements of various kinds."

It was believed that this will give the government full authority to carry out many stipulations prepared for under the Rome-Berlin axis pact.

FOOD MARKET

WITH families all over the country taking advantage of Decoration Day to plan a family outing, many specials are being offered in the markets this week for outdoor meals. Especially good values in meat for the weekend include hams, one of the ideal foods to take with you in the picnic basket. Since Decoration Day unofficially marks the first of the summer months, and fried chicken and summer are synonymous, broiling and frying chickens are available this week, because of mass merchandising methods, at prices that will make them tasty morsels to pack in the picnicking hamper.

Beef prices for the coming week remain the same, as does lamb. Fresh loins of pork, which have been most attractively priced, are even lower for the coming week, while veal remains at its same level.

Fowl Lower

Fowl, which has been an excellent buy, is slightly lower for the coming week, and ducklings remain low and plentiful. Turkeys, too, are low in price, and would make an excellent holiday weekend food, whether eaten indoors or out. All spring varieties of fish, providing good weather remains, should be plentiful this week. Large porgies, butterfish and sea bass are being caught in local waters and are reasonably priced and of good quality. The past week, due to the full moon, the fleet of seine fishermen has not been operating, and only not mackerel have been landed, but next week, with darker nights, mackerel should be more plentiful. Shrimp is now arriving in quantities, and the price is excellent. Weakfish are being caught in quantities in Long Island waters, and the price is low. Clams continue at the same low prices.

Eggs Abundant

Eggs, deviled or hardboiled, are also an excellent addition to the picnic basket, and since they are so plentiful and cheap, should be included for the family's day outside. However, this good food should not be restricted to one day a week. Healthful and nutritious, they should be regarded as a daily necessity for the family.

Strawberries are another special for the coming week. Their price is lower than it has been for some time. Other excellent fruit buys for the week are pineapple, rhubarb, oranges, bananas and apples. More cherries are arriving on the market, and the first of those luscious Bing cherries from California are in. A few apricots are also arriving from California.

In the vegetable departments, asparagus, beans, cabbage, cucumbers, peas, new potatoes, and spinach are excellent buys. Tomatoes, prohibitive in price up to now, show decided drops for the coming week. Cabbage, beets, lettuce, and celery show slight price advances.

Here is a menu made up of seasonal foods at reasonable cost:

Tomato Stuffed with Cole Slaw

had gained great headway when discovered, and firemen from Cornwells and Union companies here, and from Newport Fire Company, had a battle on their hands. Water was secured from a man-hole, and additional supplies used from tank wagons.

Mrs. Watson Wright, whose home adjoins the church property, discovered the fire. Mrs. Wright was on the lawn at the rear of her home when she heard a crackling noise from the vicinity of the kindergarten structure. Approaching the building she saw flames, and called for the rector. It was as the Rev. Williams started up the steps to enter the building that the stairs collapsed, and he sustained injuries. A physician was summoned and removed the clergyman to Frankford Hospital, where he remains for treatment.

The building measures approximately 50x30 feet. A century or so ago it was used as a public school, and since that time has been put to various uses.

The Pastry Gun

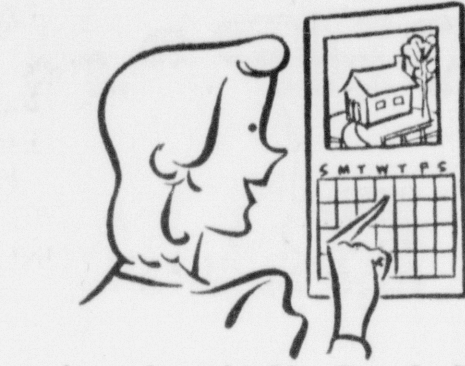

A pastry gun is an inexpensive little instrument that has been used for years by chefs and pastry cooks but has only recently become popular in the average home.

With it as an ally, the bride can turn her first dessert into an attractive dish, while the experienced matron can make pies and puddings that she never dreamed of before—desserts which have an eye appeal that brings instantaneous compliments from family or guests.

Note the growing appeal in the three desserts pictured, as the pastry gun completes its decorating job. Incidentally, this is an inexpensive milk dessert, so delicious that you should sample it whether you own a pastry gun or not. No eggs are needed. No baking or boiling necessary. Why not try it today?

Mocha Rennet-Custard
1 tablespoon ground coffee
1 1/2 cups milk (not canned or soft curd)
1/2 cup cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pkz. chocolate rennet powder
Add coffee to milk and cream and warm slowly, stirring constantly. Test a drop on inside of wrist frequently. When COMFORTABLY WARM, (120° F.) not hot, remove at once from stove, and strain quickly through muslin or several thicknesses of cheesecloth. Add vanilla and stir in the rennet powder briskly until dissolved—not over one minute. Pour at once, while still liquid, into individual dessert glasses. Do not move until firm—about 10 minutes. Chill in ice box. Serve in the same glasses. Just before serving, top with unsweetened whipped cream by using a pastry gun to form an attractive design. For children, omit the coffee.

SHE NEVER FORGETS a Date!

1 A popular girl is Miss Dorothy Bates. She never forgets anniversary dates.

2 On wedding days, birthdays or blessed event. Her greetings are always by telephone sent.

3 Her friends and her cousins, her relatives, all are flattered and pleased by a Long Distance call.

4 And Dorothy says that her plan's full of thrift—A call makes a most economical gift!

Best wishes, sent by telephone, always sound sincere. It's so easy to say "Congratulations!" this friendly, personal way. And recent reductions make many Long Distance calls lower in cost than ever before! The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania.

President Judge Hiram H. Keller, of the Bucks county courts, was yesterday tendered an honorary degree at the annual commencement exercises at Muhlenberg College. Judge Keller is a graduate and member of the board of trustees of Gettysburg College, of which Dr. Levering Tyson, president of Muhlenberg, is also a graduate.

John Grimes, 37, Kintnersville, former resident of Jamison, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Boyer to a charge of assault upon his wife and daughter on March 19, at Kintnersville, when he was shot in both legs by a neighbor, Raymond Deemer, 45, who was protecting the 17-year-old wife of the defendant and Mrs. Maggie Mondeau, the defendant's mother-in-law.

Grimes was sentenced to serve nine months to two years in the Bucks County Prison.

SEE MAYON PADLO BEAT OPPONENT, WILLIE CHEATUM

Boxing Card One of Best Ever Offered in This Vicinity

PADLO GOT 4 ROUNDS

Two Rounds Considered Even While Cheatum Was Given Two

BOXING

—Results of last night—
Mayon Padlo, Philadelphia, beat Willie Cheatum, Newark, in eight rounds.
Charlie Rauch, Trenton, stopped Ernie Fink, Union City, in the second round.
Frankie Tygh, Philadelphia, defeated Percy Cooper, Trenton, in six rounds.
Hokey Leighton, Croydon, scored a technical knockout over Jack Spina, Philadelphia, in the fourth round.
Larry Kellum, New York, won by a technical knockout over Joe Snell, Philadelphia, in the 4th.
Joe Ferraro, Bristol, lost to Tony Pascucci, Trenton, in four rounds.
Referee: Sammy Moffo and Tony Galeto.
Announcer: Harry Belogh.
Judges: Charles Liebra and Charles Alfa.
Timer: John Rich.
Physician: Dr. Richard Giordano.

A crowd, estimated at 1500, saw Mayon Padlo, hard-hitting right-hander from South Philadelphia, come off the floor to beat his colored adversary Willie Cheatum, Newark, in the wind-up of the opening boxing card of the season in the St. Ann's A. A. outdoor arena last night. The bout, the wind-up of the evening, was refereed by Tony Galeto, world's heavyweight challenger.

The boxing card as promoted by Cliff Smith and Match-maker Jimmy Reilly was one of the best ever exhibited in this section. The fans were given boxing entertainment from start to finish and were given an extra treat when Harry Belogh, world's greatest light announcer from Madison Square Garden, New York, handled the microphone from the ring.

According to the scorecard of the writer, Padlo was awarded four rounds, Cheatum two, and two were even. The colored boy from Newark won the first when soon after hostilities started he sent his opponent right cross and sent him to the canvas for the count of nine.

Padlo took the next two rounds by his aggressiveness. Cheatum had a near-perfect defense which was only brought down when caught off-guard. However, the negro did not do very much punching in these rounds and lost the ground he had gained in the first. Padlo staggered Cheatum in the third when he raised a mouse on the Newark boy's right eye.

The fourth canto was an even-Stephen affair. It was slugging from start to finish with both boys putting everything they had behind their blows. The lumm on Cheatum's eye began to swell more but it did not seem to bother him.

Padlo shook up Cheatum with a right uppercut in the fifth and carried this section as well as the mulling in the sixth. Cheatum's best round was the seventh when he twice made Padlo's knees buckle with crushing right-hand punches. On one occasion when Padlo's knees shook, Cheatum rushed him to the ropes and put all he had behind a hay-maker. But it missed its mark.

The final round was even, with action from start to finish. Both boys were tired but with the urging of Tony Galeto they kept mixing it even after the final bell had sounded. Padlo weighed 146; Cheatum, 138.

The surprise bout of the night featured that hustling Croydon youngster, Hokey Leighton. After taking the first session, Leighton was taking a terrific lacing at the hands of Jack Spina, Philadelphia.

For two rounds, Spina had piled up a big lead on Leighton. Several times he had the Croydon boy in a clinch and beat a terrible tattoo on his body. Leighton, at the start of the fourth, seemed headed for doom.

Spina rushed him into infighting again. Immediately after the break Leighton coked his foe with a short right. It found its mark on the tip of Spina's chin. Down went the Philadelphia. He took the count of nine. He got up only to be met with another right. This time he went flat on his back. Referee Moffo did not even try to count but signalled Spina's seconds to carry him from the ring. Leighton came in at 131; Spina, 129.

Larry Kellum, New York, weighing 162 pounds, scored too many body blows for Joe Snell, colored, 155, Philadelphia, with the result that the New Yorker was given the bout on a technical knockout in the fourth round. Snell started out fast and had Kellum down for a nine count in the initial session but the "Joe Palooka" nailed Snell solidly in the third and floored him. Snell went down twice in the fourth before Referee Moffo intervened.

A hard right, which Charlie Rauch, 157, Trenton, sunk into the pit of the stomach of Ernie Fink, 146, Union City, ended that bout in the second round. The boys had just begun to slug it up a bit and had a whirlwind of a time in a clinch when Rauch let go with his right. Fink went down and arose at the count of five but he could not stand on his feet and to prevent him from further punishment, Referee Moffo stopped the fight.

Despite the fact that he was floored in the first, Frankie Tygh, 149, Trenton, rallied in the closing rounds to score a triumph over Percy Cooper, 148, Trenton.

Cooper carried the first canto and the second was even but Tygh came through and took most of the remaining four rounds to win out. Tygh landed the most telling blows of the fight and also was the most aggressive.

The fights opened with a four-rounder between Pat Pascucci, Trenton, and Joe Ferraro, Bristol. Ferraro was the loser in a close decision.

ROHM & HAAS NINE DEFEATS KING SUPPLY

MORRISVILLE, June 4.—The Rohm and Haas team continued its drive for first place in the Bristol Suburban League, capturing its third straight contest last night on Island field, trimming the King Supply team, 5-3, in a wonderfully played ball game.

The tilt was a hurler's duel between Bill Vender, of the losers, and Cervellero, of the chemical workers. Cervellero had the best of the match, fanning 11 King batters and allowing five hits. The Maple Beach team mustered eight safe singles off Vender.

"Gige" Ritter and Timmy Harrison led the winners with the stick, collecting five of their eight blows. Both drove in a pair of tallies. Yeager, former Morrisville High Star, had two out of three for the King boys.

It marked the fourth straight defeat for the Morrisville team which hasn't tasted victory since the opening game of the season.

"Sure, I can lick that bum, Joe Louis. If I couldn't, I wouldn't want to fight him again."

The speaker was none other than the walking beer barrel, Tony Galeto.

Tony had no sooner arrived at the St. Ann's club-house when the several hundred youngsters who were waiting at the gate spied him alighting from his car. They immediately swarmed about him and the large banner which read "Welcome Tony Galeto—St. Ann's Athletic Association" was hidden by the crowd that milled on the door-step.

Tony's first stop was the bar-room of the St. Ann's club and there he told the gang that gathered that he would stop Max Baer in the second round and also beat Louis.

After Photographer Bill Nichols had hopped from chair to chair getting Tony in all positions, he was finally cornered.

"Do you really think you could beat Louis if you met him again?" he was asked.

His quick reply was: "Sure, I can lick the bum anytime. That's why I want to fight him again, and besides look what the bum did to me in the last fight." (He pointed to a healed cut over his left eye.)

Before he could be questioned more, Photographer Nichols wanted more snaps and then another gang of kids swarmed into the room, yelling for his autograph and not giving him a chance to drink the five glasses of beer that was placed before him.

After refereeing the wind-up, Galeto was again swarmed by autograph seekers, this time it was grown-ups but he finally made his way to the dressing room and then again to the bar-room.

Galeto was accompanied by one of his managers, Harry Mendel.

CROYDON Y. M. A. BREAKS VOLTZ WINNING STREAK

The four-game winning streak of the Voltz-Texaco nine was shattered last night on Landreth's field as the Croydon Y. M. A. team moved into a deadlock with the gasworkers for first place by winning, 4-3, in a hectic ball game.

For five innings, Johnny Schweizer had the Y's eating out of his paw, but suddenly he collapsed and Jimmy Cooper had to assume the mound duties in order to retire the side.

UGLIEST WRESTLER TO HEADLINE BILL HERE

The Swedish Angel—world's ugliest wrestler—is here, or at least he will be here Thursday night where he headlines the wrestling festivities at St. Ann's Arena, matched with Pat Corrigan, Irish sensation and flying scissor expert.

Here at last comes the man who has been sensational since he first made his appearance early last winter. A man whose looks are beyond description. He is a big fellow—this Swedish Angel stands six feet two inches, weighs 235 pounds, and is so strong that scientists who have examined him and still cannot make him out, say that he has the strength of at least three men. He has an enormous lantern-like jaw—it seems to start some where in the middle of his face and just naturally goes on. His hands are the biggest seen on any human. The fingers are thick and are all even, including the thumb. But if all this was not enough he has a clean-shaven pate which surely doesn't add to his beauty; to say nothing of a squashed nose, which spreads all over his face.

This is the man who is coming here to show himself as he is and who, besides, will demonstrate that a man, even one so ugly, can also be a first rate wrestler. The Swedish Angel, in fact, has surprised with his wrestling ability. At first, he was just an attraction as a freak, no one paid much attention to his wrestling ability, but now after some two hundred bouts, all of which he has won, he looms as one of the best heavyweights to come along in years. And don't think for a minute that he cannot go long matches. He had some pretty tough ones—some in which he needed more than an hour to beat his man. In the end, however, his terrific strength was too much even for the best grapplers, who later admitted they never encountered so powerful a man. He has tremendous arms—they almost reach to the ground—and one of his favorite means of beating his opponents is to bear-hug them with a gorilla-like embrace. He squeezes them until they become limp, then drops them helpless to the mat.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Wendkos entertained Mr. Wendkos' mother from New York, over the week-end.
